Introduction:

There is no denying of the fact that, most of the times the work of an engineer is posed against the forces of the nature. In the present day scenario, where the issues of Global warming and Ozone layer depletion are demanding for grave attention, it is of utmost significance for one and all to be aware of the nature of impact of engineering action on the environment and monitor the same.

It is thus the need of the hour for engineering fraternity to be aware of the environmental hazards impending on account of various engineering works. It is they who can then convey the significance of environmental monitoring and sustainable development to the budding engineers of our nation. The young engineers can then understand the environmental implications of various engineering activities.

It is expected that this comprehensive exposure and interaction with the experts will enable the field practioners as well as the young teachers to keep abreast with the latest developments in the realm of environmental monitoring and sustainable development.

About the Institute:

Bhilai Institute of Technology is the oldest and foremost self-financing institution of Central India. National Board of Accreditation, New Delhi has accredited this Institute. The easy accessibility of the Durg-Bhilai twin city and its proximity to the major industrial units provides a major locational advantage to this Institute.

Durg is situated on the National Highway NH-6 and Howrah-Mumbai Rail line. The nearest airport is Raipur, about 40 km away from the venue.

About the Department:

Civil Engineering Department was started in the year 1986 with a mission of Developing Professional Civil Engineers through offering effective education and interacting with Industry emphasizing R & D and consultancy. The Department is running P.G. Course in Structural Engineering. The department is proud of its learned and experienced faculty, well-equipped laboratories and other infrastructure available. The department has been recognised as a consultancy centre for road construction, traffic census, material testing, structural design, etc. by leading private and government agencies. The department is having its own computer centre linked to the BIT LAN and advanced computing Lab with latest Softwares like STAAD PRO, ANSYS, etc. The department has been accredited by National Board of Accreditation (NBA).

The alumni of this department are well placed in leading companies both in India and Abroad such as INFOSYS, TCS, SATYAM, MECON, SAIL, SAHARA, SHELL, etc.
